Protests? Count on it

2010 Census resisters insist questions are too intrusive

The anti-government sentiment that sparked the tea party movement is brewing a backlash of sorts against the coming census by people who say it asks too many questions and intrudes on their privacy.

Such census resisters say the Constitution empowers the Census Bureau only to count the number of people in a household. They say that's the only inquiry they'll respond to as the 10-question census forms are mailed to 130 million households in mid-March.

Gabriel Sanchez, the Dallas-based regional census director, says the claim is wrong.

"The truth is, when the Founding Fathers wrote the Constitution, they gave Congress the power to determine how the census is conducted. The U.S. Supreme Court has again and again upheld how the Census Bureau conducts the census," Sanchez said.

The 2010 form is the shortest in modern history, he said, and asks only simple questions such as age, gender, ethnicity and whether a dwelling is owned or rented.

But a household head count is all the census will get from Robyn Leann Burwell, 30, of Hawley, Texas.

"My position, at this point, is that the only constitutional part of it is for them to do a head count," she said. "The bottom line is, I feel like the government has been trying to find ways to get information they don't necessarily need."

Burwell, an English professor at Abilene Christian University and a Libertarian candidate for state House District 85, and her husband, John, a Libertarian candidate for U.S. House District 13 in West Texas, helped start an Abilene chapter of the 912 Project, a grassroots conservative organization.

"I think it's just really important to look at it as more than a random questionnaire. We should be asking if they really need to ask the questions," Burwell said.

Renee Higgins, a 51-year-old housewife from Merkel, Texas, and a member of the Abilene 912 Project, agrees with that stance.

"I think the only thing we need to answer is our name and how many people. Beyond that, it's none of their business," said Higgins, who says she has grown increasingly leery of all government entities.

"The overreaching things going on with our government lead people to question things. I question everything they do," she said. "I'm not some nut job. I'm a realist, and I've looked into a lot of things and I question a lot of things."

Woman: I'm the only 1 in town

The founding fathers must have chuckled at the impossibility of the job when they etched it into the Constitution: Count every man, woman and child along every back road and big-city avenue in the entire country.

From Key West to Nome, today's Americans will largely get the founders' joke yet again as the U.S. Census embarks on its once-a-decade count this year—they're accustomed to approximations of how many people plod their shared corner of the world.

Why does it really matter, after all, that a Nebraska town comprised of a tavern, a few crumbling houses, four street lamps, and one drivable, dirt street be counted exactly right?

Or even at all?

"Because I live in it," said Elsie Eiler, who is Monowi's entire population. Yet Census estimates from this summer say that there are two Monowians.

"Where's this other person?" Eiler said. "Let me know. ... I don't want to come back to my house at 11 or 12 and see someone else there."

Elsie Eiler says she is the only resident of Monowi, Neb., yet Census estimates from this summer say there are two Monowians. AP FILE PHOTO

I should get to blow up that stadium

After winning a Kraft Macaroni & Cheese essay contest, former foster child Casey Rogers will get to live every young boy's dream by blowing up something really, really big. In this case, it's Texas Stadium, former home of the Dallas Cowboys. The 11-year-old Rogers will get to trigger the April 11 implosion that will reduce the place to rubble.

As a professional journalist, author and former 11 year-old boy, I would just like to say: Whoa, total BS! That sucks! Like, that is soooo not fair!

First of all, it's not fair because I didn't even know about this contest. No one even told me, and if they did I probably thought it was just some stupid thing where you win a box of macaroni and cheese—not get to blow up a huge stadium.

Plus, my mom's been on vacation, so she couldn't tell me about it, and then my dad's just being stupid. Dad, why didn't you freaking tell me about this contest? Gawd!

Like stupid Casey even deserves to win the contest. What was it about? An essay about how you helped out your community? And Casey founded his own organization for the homeless called Casey's Heart? That is like so totally lame. What a complete butt-head.

First of all, when I was 11, I founded my own organization called Monster Club where my friends and I searched for mythical creatures like Bigfoot, the Loch Ness Monster and UFOs. Just because none of them was in the woods in my backyard where we built our fort isn't my freaking fault.

Second of all, the contest should not be about dumb clubs. It should be about who wants to blow up a stadium the most or who would be the best at it. I would totally be the best at it because I've seen "Die Hard with a Vengeance" 13 times so I know how to say cool things after I blow stuff up. Right before I blew up Texas Stadium, I'd be all like, "Check out this end zone dance!"

Then, boom!—I'd blow that monkey up.

And then after it was done exploding and crumbling, I'd totally be like, "Dare you to call excessive celebration on that one, ref!"

I'd do something awesome too like drop-kick the lever or maybe karate-chop it. People would see it on the news and be like, "That was so awesome! How'd he even time the drop-kick so that he'd have a second to cross his arms and strike a pose just before all the C4 went off? So sweet! I'm glad that foster kid didn't get the chance to mess it all up."

So I guess it's your move now, Kraft Macaroni & Cheese.

Or did I just recover a fumble?

(See, how awesome was that final line? C'mon, guys, lemme blow up the stadium!)

I would totally be the best at it because I've seen "Die Hard with a Vengeance" 13 times so I know how to say cool things after I blow stuff up. Right before I blew up Texas Stadium, I'd be all like, "Check out this end zone dance!"

O'Hare: Yes, we scan

Machine scrutinizes full body in search for hidden weapons

By Jon Hilkevitch
CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Change has come to O'Hare security.

A new tool that scrutinizes an individual's entire body for hidden weapons and explosives will begin screening passengers Monday at O'Hare, according to federal officials. Transportation Security Administration officers can conduct a scan in as little as five seconds without laying a hand on passengers as they pass through airport security checkpoints on the way to board planes.

This reporter experienced the screening process Friday at checkpoint No. 1 in the United Airlines terminal.

The single scanner at O'Hare begins operating two years after it first was announced for the airport and three months after a failed attempt by a man who sewed explosives into his underpants to blow up a Northwest Airlines jetliner over Detroit on Christmas Day.

The scan exposes potentially deadly contraband, from metallic weapons to powder or plastic explosives, planted on individuals or inside folds of skin, although it does not reveal objects inside the body, officials said.

"It's a very effective additional layer of security to get at the threat of improvised explosive devices on aircraft, one of 20 different layers that we have," said Lee Kair, TSA assistant administrator for security operations.

After I read a sign posted at the checkpoint explaining the body scan technology and informing passengers they can opt out, I stepped up to the machine and was greeted by a TSA officer named Robert (whose last name TSA did not want used).

The first thing you are told is to take everything out of your pockets, in addition to removing your shoes, belt, wristwatch and jewelry.

Robert motioned for me to enter the scanning unit and to turn to my left for front and back images. You place your feet on footprint markings on the floor, resulting in a slightly spread-eagle position, and raise your arms for about five seconds.

Robert then alerted a TSA security officer

Going through the new scanner

Some passengers traveling through O'Hare soon will undergo full-body scans, unless they prefer a pat-down and going through a metal detector. To allay privacy concerns, TSA officers who examine the images are prevented from seeing the passengers who are scanned.

1 A TSA officer instructs the passenger to step between the two imaging units and raise his or her hands for about five seconds.

2 The imaging units bounce low-dose X-rays off the passenger's front and back to generate images of their physical structure. A filter blurs the face and features. Objects inside body cavities do not show. The scan process takes about 30 seconds.

3 The images are sent to the resolution room with high walls and opaque glass, where another officer interprets them.

4 If no irregularities are found, the passenger is cleared to continue on his or her way. The image is immediately destroyed and there is no capability of storing the image or e-mailing it.

5 If an irregularity is found, like anomalies below the clothes, the initial officer conducts a pat-down search. If anything is discovered, the passenger may be subjected to a more invasive search.

in a locked Resolution Room away from the screening lane to check the image. The security officer inside the room radioed back an all-clear, and Robert directed me to exit the scanner and pick up my carry-on items.

If some type of anomaly had been found on my body during the scan, I would have been guided to a corral at the security checkpoint where pat-downs and scans using hand-held metal detectors are conducted. If the pat-down was inconclusive, officials would have escorted me to a private room for a more invasive search.

The image taken of me was immediately erased, officials said, adding that it is impossible to store or e-mail the image. To help ensure that the images cannot be copied, TSA officers also are prohibited from taking cell phones and other electronic devices into the Resolution Room.

Technology not without controversy

Civil liberty groups—and even Pope Benedict XVI—have criticized full-body screening machines, saying they violate the privacy of passengers. But even the pontiff cannot slow the Transportation Security Administration's goal of installing nearly 1,000 such units at airports across the country during the next two years or so.

The 11 airports chosen in the latest deployment were selected based on the risk of terrorist attacks and how quickly the units could be installed with the least amount of construction, TSA spokeswoman Suzanne Trevino said.

In some airports, work crews must add electrical wiring and floor supports and make other terminal renovations before the TSA can add the units, she said.

During the past two years, the TSA has had 40 such units operating at 19 airports. It recently purchased 150 units built by Torrance-based Rapiscan Systems Inc.

By the end of the year, the agency plans to order 300 additional units, although the manufacturer has yet to be chosen. TSA plans to order 500 more units next year, Trevino said.

The ultimate goal, she said, is to have enough scanners at every major U.S. airport so that all 2 million people who fly each day get scanned. AP

A sobering St. Pat's vibe

As it neared noon Sunday, Keegan's Pub on South Western Avenue was eerily quiet. A waitress leaned against a counter. A few patrons sipped Guinness at the bar.

"Usually by 11:15, we're at capacity, but this year it's empty," owner Bernard Callaghan said.

South Side business owners and residents were absorbing the full effect of the cancellation of the South Side Irish Parade, an annual event that usually flooded their Beverly neighborhood with hundreds of thousands of people. Organizers called off the parade after unruly revelers disrupted the festivities last year and nearly a dozen police officers were assaulted.

Meanwhile, on the Northwest Side, scores of green-clad families and revelers watched their own St. Patrick's Day Parade.

"The parade was fantastic this year," said Melissa Powers of Gladstone Park.

There was only glumness among Callaghan and other bar owners.

"It's terrible," Callaghan said. "The economic impact on this whole neighborhood is going to be terrible. This was their best day of the year, and now it's gone."

Jax McKendry said she woke up Sunday and wondered how her family's celebration would change. They live just blocks from Western Avenue and traditionally host a huge party.

"It left us in a quandary," she said.

But the lack of a parade wasn't necessarily bad. For the first time in years she was able to attend Mass with her family. Usually, she had to stay home to prepare for the party.

2 women beaten in Chinatown

Two women were beaten and their purses stolen as they walked in Chinatown early Sunday, police said. The attack happened about 5:30 a.m. on the 2200 block of South Wentworth Avenue as the women, in their 40s, were walking on the sidewalk, said Chicago Police News Affairs Officer John Mirabelli. The women were grabbed from behind by one or more people who struck them with a blunt object, causing facial and head injuries, Mirabelli said.

2 men shot on South Side

Two men, described as being in their 30s, were shot Sunday morning in South Shore. About 1:10 a.m., the men walked into Jackson Park Hospital and told the staff they were shot at 76th Street and Jeffery Boulevard. Both men were listed as in stable condition at the hospital, said police. No one is in custody for the shooting. Police are investigating.

Evanston phone ban under way

Evanston officials are warning motorists that, beginning Monday, it will be illegal to use a handheld cell phone while driving through the suburb. As a way to warn motorists of the new ordinance, Evanston Police will conduct educational enforcement actions between Monday and March 22, Evanston Police Cmdr. Tom Guenther said in a statement. During that time, Evanston police will issue verbal warnings to drivers to further educate them on the ordinance, Guenther said.

Teen shot, seriously injured

A 16-year-old boy was shot several times and seriously injured Saturday afternoon in Austin. About 4:38 p.m., police found the youth shot multiple times in the abdomen in the 5100 block of West St. Paul Avenue. The boy was taken to Children's Memorial Hospital and described as being in serious condition. Police are investigating.

3 with U.S. ties gunned down

1 Three people with ties to the American consulate in a drug-plagued Mexican city were killed in a drive-by shooting, a U.S. official said Sunday. Two American citizens and a spouse of a Mexican employee were killed Saturday afternoon, the official said.

White House criticizes plan

2 The White House isn't relenting in its strong criticism of Israel for plans to build 1,600 new apartments for Jews in east Jerusalem, which Palestinians are seeking as their future capital. Israel announced the construction plans this past week just as Vice President Joe Biden was visiting the region.

Guns traced to same locale

3 Two guns used in high-profile shootings this year at the Pentagon and a Las Vegas courthouse both came from the same unlikely place: the police and court system of Memphis. Law enforcement officials told The Associated Press on Sunday that both guns were once seized in criminal cases in Memphis.

Explosions rock Kandahar

4 The governor of Kandahar province demanded more security around Afghanistan's largest southern city Sunday after a series of explosions killed dozens of people in the Taliban heartland—the target of the war's next major offensive by Afghan and international forces.

Dozens missing in avalanche

5 An avalanche struck a rally of up to 200 snowmobilers in Canada's Rocky Mountains on Saturday, killing at least three people and leaving an unknown number missing, police said. Rescuers were scouring remote Boulder Mountain early Sunday morning, the Royal Canadian Mounted Police said.

Vatican defends celibacy rule

6 The Vatican on Sunday denied that its celibacy requirement for priests was the root cause of the clerical sex abuse scandal convulsing the church in Europe and again defended the pope's handling of the crisis.

Thousands protest government in Bangkok

Vejjajiva

7 As many as 100,000 people demonstrated peacefully against Thailand's government at a party-like rally Sunday, but Bangkok was being kept on edge by their threat to continue protesting until Prime Minister Abhisit Vejjajiva calls new elections.

Runaway Prius scrutinized

8 SAN DIEGO Investigators with Toyota Motor Corp. and the federal government could not replicate the runaway speeding reported by a Prius owner who said his car's accelerator stuck as he drove on a California freeway, according to a memo drafted for a congressional panel.

The memo, obtained Saturday by The Associated Press, said the experts who examined and test drove the car could not replicate the sudden, unintended acceleration James Sikes said he encountered. A backup mechanism that shuts off the engine when the brake and gas pedals are floored also worked properly during tests.

Sikes, 61, called 911 on Monday to report losing control of his 2008 Prius as the hybrid reached speeds of 94 mph. A California Highway Patrol officer helped Sikes bring the vehicle to a safe stop on Interstate 8 near San Diego.

The incident happened at the worst possible time for Toyota, which has recalled millions of cars because of floor mats that can snag gas pedals or accelerators that can sometimes stick. Just hours before the incident, Toyota had called reporters to its Torrance, Calif. office to hear experts refute claims that the company had not identified—or fixed—what might be causing its cars to speed out of control.

Sikes' car was covered by the floor mat recall but not the one for sticky accelerators. He later told reporters that he tried to pull on the gas pedal during his harrowing ride, but it didn't "move at all."

Fan: Packers saved my life

9 GREEN BAY, Wis. A Wisconsin man who says his Green Bay Packers loyalties helped save his life has been voted into the team's Fan Hall of Fame.

The team announced the honor Saturday for Jim Becker, 79. He attended Packers games for 56 years.

Becker says his passion for his team helped save his life. He and his wife raised 11 kids, so money was tight. To afford his season tickets without taking money from his family, he began selling his blood for $15 per pint.

His doctor later found that Becker's father died at age 43 of a condition in which the blood retains too much iron. The only treatment is to remove the iron by giving blood.

By that time Becker had sold 145 pints to pay for his season tickets. He says if he hadn't, he too may have died young.

IT'S MADNESS

UNPREDICTABLE NCAA TOURNAMENT BRINGS THE FANS, NON-FANS TOGETHER

By Ryan Smith
FOR REDEYE

It's doubtful the phrase "beware the ides of March" was ever meant to serve as a warning about the dangers of March Madness, but perhaps it's time.

That's because America is hopelessly addicted to the 65-team basketball tournament while many sports are having trouble finding mass audiences, said Irving Rein, professor of communications studies at Northwestern and author of "The Elusive Fan: Reinventing Sports in a Crowded Marketplace."

"Most sports in America now are pretty niche, but March Madness is one of those elite events that continue to bring in the broad audience and the mass appeal," Rein said.

But what makes March so full of madness?

It's an alluring combination of factors that contribute to the nationwide obsession, Rein said. There's the sheer number of people directly involved ("64 teams means a lot of fans, alumni and faculty," he said), the insatiable wall-to-wall media coverage on TV and online, the ever-present nature of games on consecutive days and the factor Rein calls "the uncertainty principle."

"There are a lot of people drawn to the uncertainty of it, the 'What is going to happen?' factor," Rein said. This in turn brings in the other big force behind the March Madness machine: Las Vegas and gambling.

"It's almost incalculable how many billions of dollars are gambled every year for the tournament," he said. "It's absolutely huge."

Whether you're a Sin City gambler or an office tourney pool player, RedEye is here to feed your March Madness with 10 NCAA tournament facts you might not have known.

How strong is the appeal of March Madness? Well, the NCAA estimates one in 10 Americans will fill out a bracket, and a research firm estimates the event costs employers $4 billion in lost productivity.

APPHOTO

1 Take a crack at a bracket

The NCAA estimates that one in 10 Americans will complete an NCAA tournament bracket this year.

Joining March Madness pools has become a kind of social currency, Rein said.

"It's water-cooler talk that feeds the frenzy," he said. "You get this feeling of 'I'm in, I'm cool, I'm part of the conversation.'"

Many Chicagoans don't stop at one bracket. Just ask Shane Smith of Evanston, who plans to join three NCAA pools—one each with his friends, family and co-workers.

"I guess you can say I get pretty serious about it," the 33-year-old investment banker said.

2 Work it

Your boss probably hates March Madness. The cost to employers in lost productivity during the tournament is approximately $4 billion, according to an estimate by John Challenger of the research firm Challenger, Gray & Christmas.

Jeff Arbuckle, a project manager for a general contractor, said the buzz that comes after a night of NCAA tournament games usually means it takes an extra hour until his office actually begins work.

"Productivity is definitely slow at work during that time, and it's kind of accepted," said Arbuckle, 25, of Roscoe Village. "You might normally start work at 8, but with everyone talking about the games, you would maybe start at 9 a.m. instead."

Joel Clifford, manager at Wrigleyville sports bar Redmond's, expects a lot of people will use sick days to watch the tournament.

"Maybe it isn't the best thing in our country's economic situation, but that's how it goes," Clifford said.

3 Sin City

Sometimes what happens in Vegas doesn't stay in Vegas. The FBI estimates that more than $2.5 billion is illegally wagered annually on March Madness. Less than 4 percent of that amount is wagered legally in Nevada.

But being in Vegas during March Madness is a surreal sight, Smith said.

"It's crazy because you see all these people cheering loudly at these games, but it's not because it's their team, it's because someone just covered the spread," he said.

4 Origin of the species

The term "March Madness" actually was borrowed from the Illinois High School Association. IHSA official H.V. Porter was the first to use the phrase in the title of a 1939 essay describing a high school basketball tournament in Illinois. The phrase was reportedly first used to describe college basketball by CBS reporter Brent Musburger during a telecast in 1982.

5 Second City drought

Think the Bulls have had a long championship drought? It's been nearly 50 years since a Chicago team last won a championship. That would be Loyola University way back in 1963, which beat Cincinnati 60-58.

6 Meet Cinderella

There may never be another Villanova. (The Wildcats won the tournament as a No. 8 seed in 1985). Since then, the closest a Cinderella has come to winning is No. 6-seeded Kansas winning it all in 1988.

"I think a lot of people watch for the underdogs," Arbuckle said. "Even if they don't win the whole thing, I usually have a Cinderella team beforehand I like to go with."

Kansas snagged a No. 1 seed in the tourney

7 Bracket racket

Ever wonder why some companies offer millions of dollars for perfect brackets? Their money is safe. The odds of picking a perfect bracket randomly are 9,223,372,036,854,775,808 to 1, or more than nine quintillion to one.

"It's hard; I always lose," Arbuckle said. "Last year, the pool I was in started giving last place their money back, and I won."

8 Evanston, ground zero

The first NCAA championship took place in Evanston in 1939; eight teams were invited. The tournament expanded to 64 teams in 1985 and to 65 in 2001.

9 Heroes to zeroes

Only twice in the history of the tournament have the finalists in one year failed to make the tournament field the following year. Last year's champ, North Carolina, was left out in the cold, but runner-up Michigan State drew a No. 5 seed.

10 In a city far, far away

There may be something to that home-court advantage thing. There is a correlation between the distance a team travels for a game and the outcome during the tournament, according to analysis by the News & Observer of Raleigh, N.C. According to the report, teams playing within 100 miles won 77 percent of their games over the past 12 years. At 250 miles, teams won 69 percent, and teams that traveled 500 miles or more won 46.5 percent.

Mad chatter

Jason Narvaez answered these questions on the Five on Five blog, and the next thing he knew, he was in RedEye. Be next at redyechicago.com/5on5.

TOPIC	JIMMY GREENFIELD jgreenfield@chicagonow.com	ELLIOTT SERRANO redyechicago.com/geektome	MARC SILVERMAN twitter.com/waddleandsilvy	JASON NARVAEZ redyesports@tribune.com	BUSTER BRACKET redyesports@tribune.com
1 What's your favorite part of the NCAA tournament?	When Kansas cuts down the nets.	Watching Jimmy's brackets turn into scrap paper.	When Gus Johnson is yelling. I guess that's the whole tourney. "HaHaaal!"	Attempting to hit as many dive bars with cheap booze as I can each day during the tournament.	Everyone's bracket falling apart one game into the tourney. Heh, heh.
2 So, who's your Cinderella?	Cornell. They will not go quietly.	DVD Geeks' Mary Czerwinski, but I'm not her Prince Charming.	Whomever is playing Kansas.	BYU: Bring 'em Young University. How can you not root for a bunch of Cougars trying to score?	If I told you, that would take all the fun out of it, now wouldn't it?
3 Which sport could use some March Madness of its own?	The NBA, if only to just end its season.	Baseball. It's spring training, and like Ozzie Guillen, I'm already "boreddddd.".	The sport of "being optimistic about the Cubs." Plenty of it in March, always ends in April.	Golf. Bring back Tiger Woods, along with his wife as caddie so she always has a golf club in hand.	Before this weekend I would have said hockey, but the Blackhawks made everyone mad the past two games.
4 Whom would you like to snub in sports?	Would love to snub the Cubs but I'm way too far gone.	Ozzie Guillen's webmaster. Oh wait, Kenny Williams beat me to it.	I wish I would've snubbed all that green beer Saturday. My toilet looked like the Chicago river.	I'd say the Mariners, but Milton Bradley would go on national TV and accuse me of being racist.	ESPN's bracketologist. You can't predict it, you can only hope to contain it.
5 What is your biggest concern in Chicago sports right now?	The Blackhawks made me physically ill this weekend.	Chicago's PCW losing manager extraordinaire PL "Shot to the Top" Myers to TNA or WWE.	Anyone wearing the goalie pads for the Hawks. What the puck? Bad weekend.	Cubs. They have more incompetent, overpaid people on their payroll than the Illinois government.	The lack of a powerhouse Chicago college basketball team. Pick it up, slackers.

‘Cats lock horns with Rams

What is Jeremy Nash looking forward to about playing in the NIT?

“Winning the whole thing,” the Northwestern guard replied. “Making it to Madison Square Garden and winning a championship.”

NU’s 20-win season has given the seventh-seeded Wildcats a surge a confidence, but their road to New York will be anything but easy.

First up is a Wednesday matchup (6 p.m., ESPNU) against second-seeded Rhode Island, which finished fifth in the Atlantic 10 after going 9-7 in league play and 23-9 overall. The Rams scored non-league wins over Providence, Boston College and Oklahoma State.

And the game will be played at the Thomas M. Ryan Center in Kingston, where Rhode Island is 13-2 this season.

Illinois also is represented by Illinois State in the NIT. The Redbirds will travel to Dayton at 6 p.m. Wednesday.

NIT picking

Illinois heads to second-tier tourney as No. 1 seed

Illinois is a No. 1 tournament seed—in the NIT.

Illinois was left out of the NCAA tournament for the second time in three seasons.

The Illini will play Stony Brook in the NIT at 8 p.m. Wednesday on ESPNU.

Illinois (19-14) opened the season in the Top 25. But it closed the regular season with five losses in six games and had ugly early-season losses to Utah, Bradley and Georgia.

“I don’t think we have anyone to blame but ourselves, when it comes down to it,” Illinois coach Bruce Weber said.

Illinois was 5-9 against top 50 opponents, including two wins over No. 11 Wisconsin. The most recent came Friday in the Big Ten tournament and, combined with a double-overtime loss to fifth-ranked Ohio State, gave the Illini slim hopes they might slip into the NCAAs.

The Illini opened the season at No. 23. With promising young freshmen D.J. Richardson and Brandon Paul joining established third-year starters Mike Davis, Demetri McCamey and Mike Tisdale, they looked like a team that could challenge for one of the top spots in the Big Ten.

But the Utah and Bradley losses at the Las Vegas Invitational Tournament cost Illinois its ranking. And the Illini struggled until a month into the Big Ten season, when it won five straight and beat Wisconsin and then Michigan State.

That, however, was followed by the 1-5 regular-season finish.

» David Beckham has torn his left Achilles tendon and is at risk of missing the World Cup. The former England captain injured himself in the closing minutes of AC Milan’s 1-0 win over Chievo Verona on Sunday.

» After taking Saturday off, the banged-up Bulls returned to the Berto Center practice court Sunday. However, Derrick Rose and Luol Deng participated only in limited noncontact drills, and coach Vinny Del Negro said even that didn’t go well for Deng.

» Antti Niemi and the Blackhawks let a three-goal, third-period lead disappear and Nicklas Backstrom scored the game-winner in overtime to give Washington a 4-3 victory Sunday at the United Center.

» Cubs 8, L.A. Angels 7 » White Sox 5, Cincinnati 5 » Will Power wins IndyCar Sao Paulo Indy 300. » LaDainian Tomlinson signs with N.Y. Jets.

Detox 101

Expert tips for bouncing back during St. Patrick's Day week

By Erin Brereton

Livers of Chicago, we hear you. It was a tough weekend, and it's only going to get rougher. You've got just 48 hours to detox between the weekend-long St. Paddy's Day pre-party and the next round of green beer. In times like these, Extra-Strength Tylenol and a nap won't get you where you need to go. We turned to a panel of experts, each uniquely qualified, for serious detoxification tips. ERIN BRERETON IS A METROMIX SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR. METROMIX@TRIBUNE.COM

What's the first thing you should eat or drink if you wake up hungover?	If you're really hungover, drink warm water with lemon. It helps stimulate the liver to do some regeneration.	Caffeine-free herbal tea—I'd recommend a ginseng blend. 	Nothing's better than a Big Mac and a McDonald's Coke. 	Fresh juices to bring your electrolytes back up ... and water, water, water.	A burger. White Castle is always good.
What's the most unorthodox hangover cure you've tried or prescribed?	Ozone bathing—we have it at my wellness center. It helps the cells to detox and regenerate really quickly. You get in an ozone bath, and you're done with your hangover.	A steam bath or sauna ... sweat it out. 	One of our waitresses told me that Midol works.	A milkshake made with raw eggs, which is pretty gross. Or the hair of the dog—who wants to drink something again if you've already barfed?	They always say that the hair of the dog helps—whatever you were drinking the night before.
Personally, I'm most in need of detox after ...	Traveling.	If I overdose on tropical fruit, in the morning I'm not so happy and ache.	Working at a bar after St. Patty's Day week. 	Every time I listen to the Republicans speak.	Parade day! I could use a couple days' rest after that.
Guinness or whiskey?	I don't drink a drop. Guinness is beer? Then I'd go for the beer because hops are healthy.	I prefer celery juice.	Whiskey. All the way.	Oh, whiskey. When I drink, I drink whiskey straight up.	I don't drink, but I'd probably have gin if I did. I'd go with something clear.
Beer before liquor: Will it really make you sicker?	Drinking liquor first would probably be better because by the time you'd get to beer, you wouldn't drink as much!	If you mix your drinks, it will definitely impact you even worse. Seriously ... stay with one drink and one drink only.	Of course.	Absolutely. That's why when I drink, I don't mix it with anything.	I'm married to a drinker, and it's so true. It will hit you faster and you will not be feeling good the next morning.

THE STOOGES

MEMBERS: Ron Asheton, Scott Asheton, Iggy Pop, James Williamson

HOMETOWN: Detroit

KNOWN FOR: Simple, grinding rock that formed the base for punk, grunge and indie rock.

BIGGEST HIT: No chart singles, but best known for "I Wanna Be Your Dog"

WORKING ON: A summer European tour

Associated Press

Iggy Pop was starting to feel like the Susan Lucci of rock 'n' roll.

Just as the veteran soap actress believed she might never win a Daytime Emmy, the godfather of punk was certain his groundbreaking band The Stooges never would earn a spot in the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame.

Well, as it turns out, Lucci got her gold statue on the 19th try. And Iggy and the boys finally are getting their shot to search and destroy at Monday's induction ceremony, on their eighth attempt.

"At least I won't be nominated anymore," Pop said, laughing.

He believed The Stooges never would get into the Rock Hall "right up until the day before somebody called me."

"I kept telling the guys over and over: 'We're not gonna get in, guys.' Yeah. I was absolutely sure of that," Pop said in an interview.

It's hard to say exactly what turned the tide in voter sentiment, but Pop points to three possibilities: the band's long streak of Rock Hall futility, the January 2009 death of founding member Ron Asheton and ... Madonna.

The Stooges honored their fellow Michigan native by performing rocking versions of two of her hits—"Burning Up" and "Ray of Light"—on the night of the 2008 Rock and Roll Hall of Fame induction ceremony.

Pop says the gig helped provide some much-needed exposure for a band that wasn't really heard from for 30 years—the result of numerous band breakups and lineup changes that current members blame on drugs and fights over money.

"I thought, 'Well, some of the people there will see that we don't have horns. We're not gonna breathe fire on the tables or anything,'" he said. "I knew the thing would be televised, and 15 to 20 percent of the viewers wouldn't be able to differentiate. If they see you on TV, they'll think you've been inducted anyway."

Whatever the reason, the guys will be on stage at New York's Waldorf Astoria Hotel, but this time they will perform their own tunes.

They selected "I Wanna Be Your Dog" and "Search and Destroy," two songs Stooges guitarist James Williamson says are "the most representative" of the band's work.

The latter was on the 1973 album "Raw Power," which rates No. 125 on Rolling Stone's list of the 500 greatest albums of all time. The magazine called it a "proto-punk-rock classic" that featured a certain "hellbent ferocity."

Fans love and critics appreciate "Search and Destroy" for its searing guitar riff and signature Iggy Pop lyrics. It kicks off with the singer's guttural snarl: "I'm a street-walkin' cheetah with a heart full of napalm."

The song also served as the soundtrack for a Nike ad that memorably featured athletes bleeding and vomiting during competition. The song more recently popped up in an episode of ABC's "Lost"—it was blasted through a record player while a distraught Sawyer (Josh Holloway) drowned his sorrows following the death of his girlfriend.

Pop, whose solo effort "Lust For Life" also has enjoyed a second life in movies and commercials, sees the usage as an alternate means of exposing people to the music.

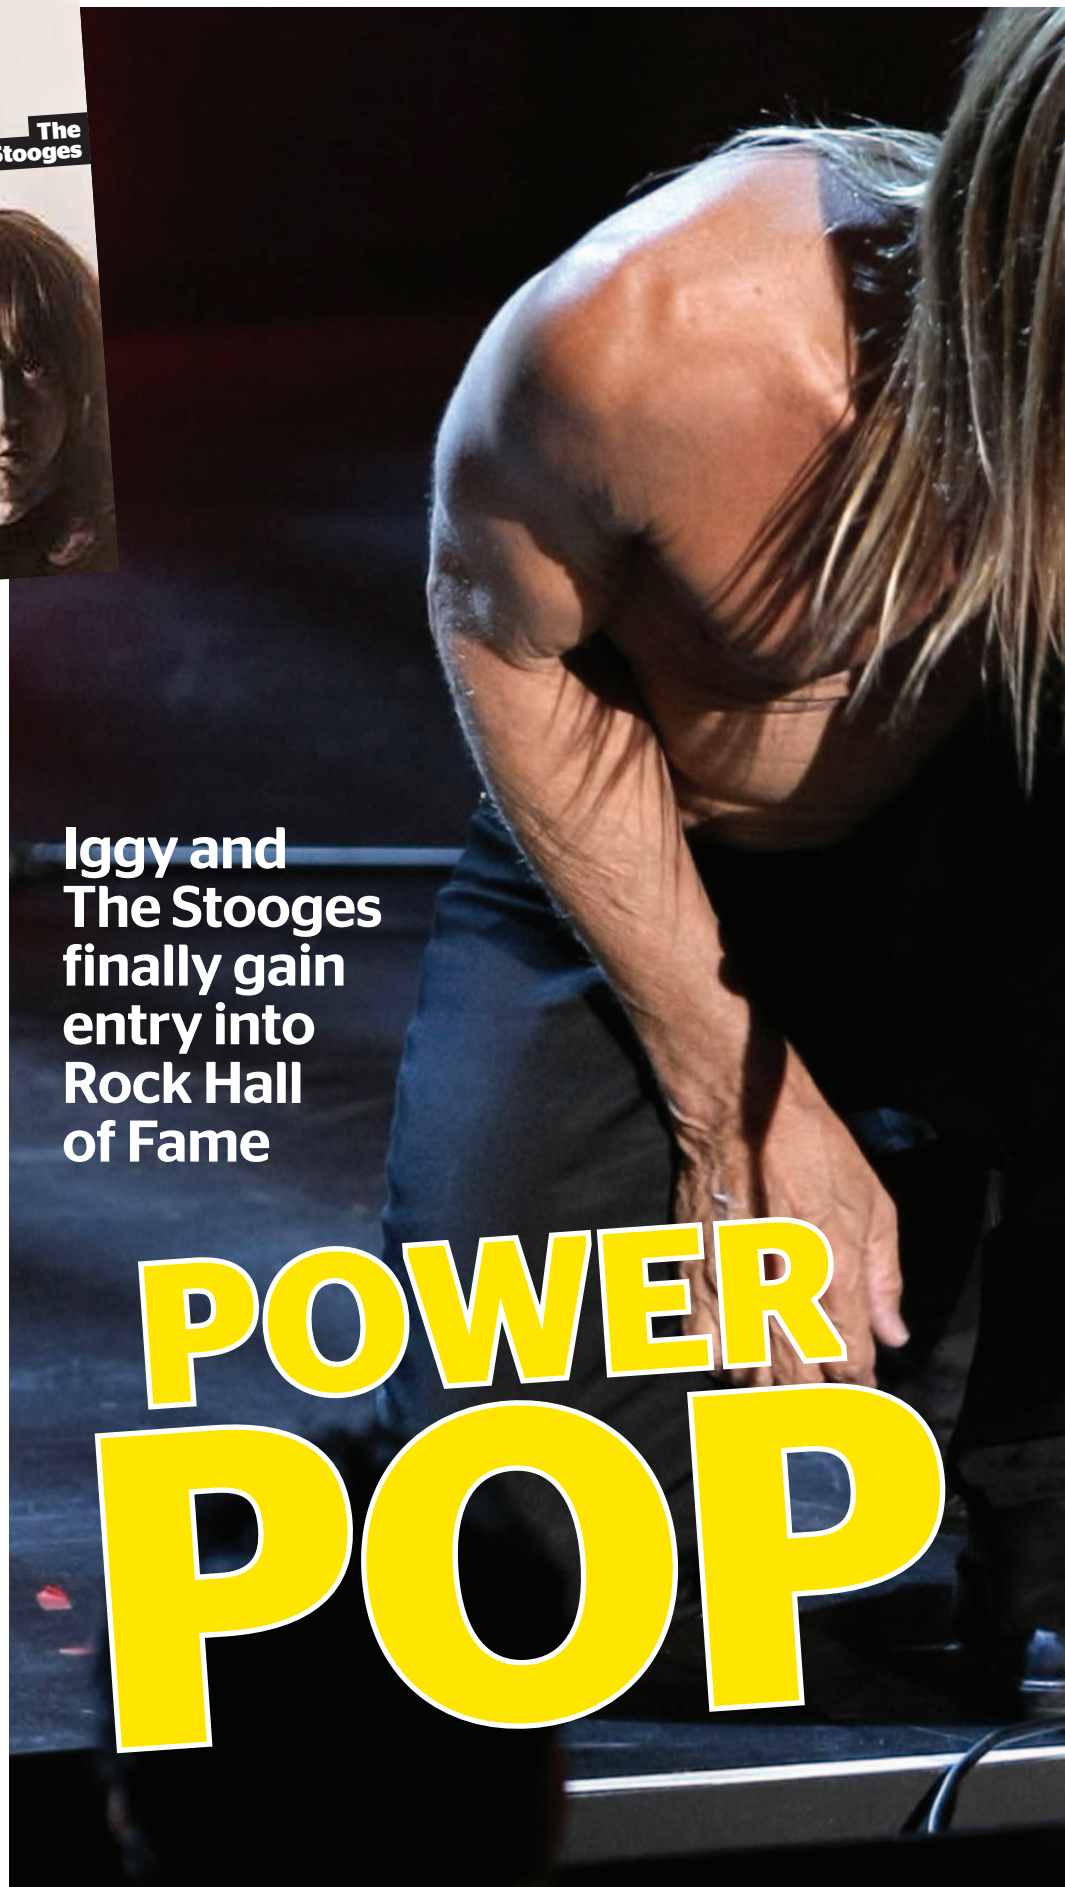

"[The Stooges] didn't get the radio airplay," he said. "We were shut out of the goodies of the industry."

Mamma mia! Hall embraces diverse acts

Newsday

The 2010 Rock and Roll Hall of Fame induction class may be the most diverse in the hall's 24 years, stretching from pop to punk with experimental art rock in between.

No one was more surprised about ABBA's inclusion than the band's co-founder Benny Andersson. "We're a pop band from the North Pole," Andersson said, calling from his studio in Stockholm. "There's no such thing as a [continental European] band in the Rock Hall, so it is flattering. It feels good, but it's very unexpected."

Here's a look at some of the new inductees:

Collins

GENESIS

MEMBERS: Tony Banks, Phil Collins, Peter Gabriel, Steve Hackett, Anthony Phillips, Mike Rutherford

HOMETOWN: Godalming, England

KNOWN FOR: Two distinct periods—the prog-rock era with Gabriel and the poppier era led by Collins—where the band dominated the British rock scene.

BIGGEST HIT: "Invisible Touch" (No. 1, 1986)

WORKING ON: Though Genesis says its 2007 tour was its last, its members all have active solo careers.

Cliff

JIMMY CLIFF

HOMETOWN: St. Catherine, Jamaica

KNOWN FOR: Turning reggae into a more rebellious, serious art form and bringing it to a worldwide audience in the movie "The Harder They Come."

BIGGEST HIT: "I Can See Clearly Now" (No. 18, 1993)

WORKING ON: Finishing a new album—"Existence"—and readying a world tour

ABBA

MEMBERS: Benny Andersson, Bjorn Ulvaeus, Agnetha Faltskog, Anni-Frid Lyngstad

HOMETOWN: Stockholm

KNOWN FOR: Pristine pop that succeeded around the world, making them Sweden's second-biggest company in the late '70s, behind Volvo.

BIGGEST HIT:

"Dancing Queen" (No. 1, 1977)

WORKING ON: Though they reportedly have been offered $1 billion to reunite, the members of ABBA work separately. Andersson released a solo album, "Story of a Heart," earlier this month, including collaborations with Ulvaeus, with whom he also works for the staging of the musical "Mamma Mia!" Faltskog released a solo album in 2004. Lyngstad is focusing on charity work.

'Justified' in its own league

Walton Goggins wasn't sure he'd ever get to play another character like Shane Vendrell from FX's "The Shield."

After the loose cannon detective killed his partner, it was easy for fans to hate him. But in Goggins' hands, Vendrell remained likable for seven seasons.

Goggins might have to work overtime to get viewers to like his latest character, white supremacist Boyd Crowder in FX's gritty new drama "Justified."

The series, based on the short story "Fire In the Hole" by crime novelist and executive producer Elmore Leonard ("Get Shorty," "Out of Sight"), premieres at 9 p.m. Tuesday. The show follows Raylan Givens, a U.S. Marshall who returns to his hometown after a controversy.

"It's such an interesting challenge to humanize all of these guys that are on paper perceived to be bad," Goggins told me during an exclusive phone interview. "That's kind of been my blessing and my curse."

"It's like, 'OK, Goggins, make people like this guy.'"

Crowder is a childhood friend of the show's main character, Givens (Timothy Olyphant). But while Givens grew up to leave the backwoods of eastern Kentucky, Crowder stayed, working in the coal mines and developing a taste for blowing things up.

Crowder may sound like the Southern bad boy viewers have seen before, which is partly why Goggins initially turned down the role. The Atlanta native has played plenty of them. But, Goggins said, he talked with Olyphant, show creator Graham Yost and the people at FX about how he perceived Crowder as more than a baddie, and then signed on for the pilot.

Now we'll see him in several episodes this season—and not in the way you might expect after watching Tuesday's debut.

"He has blossomed into this extremely complex guy that you think you know," Goggins said. "When you first meet him, you put him in a box only to have that box kind of kicked out on all four sides and the roof."

The uptick in upchucks

The Kansas City Star

In "Crazy Heart," Oscar winner Jeff Bridges is an alcoholic country singer who interrupts his sets to call for "Ralph" in a back alley trash can.

In the recent "Shutter Island," we first see Leonardo DiCaprio doing the old breakfast catch-and-release over a ferry-boat's toilet.

These two examples are part of a stomach-churning trend. The most popular bodily function in the movies these days isn't sex. It's vomiting.

In "It's Complicated," Meryl Streep drinks too much and ends up worshipping at the porcelain altar.

In the past year we've seen Paul Rudd laying a Technicolor yawn on Jon Favreau in "I Love You, Man," a terrified Alison Lohman losing her lunch in "Drag Me to Hell" and a young cancer victim in "My Sister's Keeper" reacting to chemo by, yes, throwing up.

In the opening scene of "The International," a federal agent who has been injected with poison clutches his arm, barfs and keels over from a heart attack.

We're just getting started.

There were vomit scenes in "Adventureland," "The Haunting in Connecticut," "Year One," "The Hangover," "Moon" and "Observe and Report," all in the past 12 months.

And those are just the ones that immediately came to mind.

Back in the Golden Age of Hollywood, when the Production Code limited eyebrow-raising content, nobody vomited, unless you were on a ship at sea and it was presented as a joke. Not that we actually saw anything untoward.

Of course, back then people in movies didn't bleed, go to the bathroom, have sex or even sleep in double beds.

But along with graphic violence and nudity, we started in the '60s to see people hurling in the movies. And not just discreet dribbles. No, we're talking copious projectile vomiting as displayed in 1986's "Stand By Me" (the fat kid at the pie-eating contest) or the obese Mr. Creosote in Monty Python's

'The Exorcist'

"The Meaning of Life" in 1983. Heck, a puppet blew dinner in 2004's "Team America: World Police."

The all-time cinema vomit champ, of course, is "The Exorcist." Little girls and green slime make an unbeatable combination.

Google "movie vomit scenes," and you'll be treated to countless clips of actors letting fly.

Every now and then we get real-life hurling in the movies. In his 2004 documentary "Super Size Me," filmmaker Morgan Spurlock packed away an extra-large McDonald's lunch, turned green and freed his meal on camera.

Maybe today's filmmakers think that by depicting vomiting on-screen they're raising the bar on realism. And yet nothing could be further from realism than your typical Hollywood release.

HAPPY B-DAY! Pisces

Feb. 19-March 20

A bouncy moon is helping you see love in a whole new way. Your ex-boyfriend wasn't psychotic; he was damaged and misunderstood. Your ex-girlfriend wasn't a slut; she was simply an extremely friendly person. You'll soon sober up.

Aries

March 21-April 19

You won't take no for an answer as Mercury increases your sexual confidence. You'll keep asking that cute neighbor out until he submits to your will. You'll continue to send that hot girl suggestive text messages until she finally texts you back.

Taurus

April 20-May 20

Mars says don't ask your friends for advice about love. Do you want Emo Ernie, your guy pal, to bore you with tales of his last failed romance? Do you need Depressive Debbie, your closest female friend, to remind you that relationships are hard?

Gemini

May 21-June 21

You're feeling more optimistic about dating, thanks to a flirty moon. Even though you've crashed and burned, you're over it. As you get ready for spring, you're focusing on making positive changes to your life. Finding a romantic soulmate should be a part of that.

Cancer

June 22-July 22

You're emerging from your shell and wondering if it's safe to come out and party. It is. A friendly sun is encouraging you to socialize. Accept every invitation that comes your way, no matter how weird it seems. Expand your circle of sexy acquaintances.

Leo

July 23-Aug. 22

Mercury is making you more of a smart aleck than usual. You'll make sassy comments to someone you want to impress. Unfortunately, this technique might backfire. Insulting someone's looks, intelligence or political beliefs isn't the way to get him or her into bed.

Virgo

Aug. 23-Sept. 22

There are four planets opposite your sign, which means your sexual mojo is drooping. Don't worry. It soon will recover. In the meantime, read a book, do your taxes or attend to other mundane tasks instead of focusing on romance.

Libra

Sept. 23-Oct. 23

A former flame is trying to get your attention. Saturn is showing you that the past doesn't always stay in the past. You could have unfinished business with someone whose heart you broke or whose self-esteem you damaged. Fix it.

Scorpio

Oct. 24-Nov. 21

You can't hold back any longer. You have to tell that special someone how you feel. Craft a love letter that will put dead poets to shame or create an artistic portrait that will move the viewer to tears. The moon says channel those romantic cravings into something beautiful.

Sagittarius

Nov. 22-Dec. 21

You'll be tempted to tell your partner the truth, but that's not a good idea. Mercury says be kind, not cruel. Even though you did sleep around on your girlfriend or you did get in touch with your ex-boyfriend, your current lover doesn't need to know that right now.

Capricorn

Dec. 22-Jan. 19

You could be revisiting dreams from the past, courtesy of Pluto. You're dreaming about an old love, even though he or she has moved on. Do you really want to dig up those old skeletons in your closet? Leave 'em buried.

Aquarius

Jan. 20-Feb. 18

With Mars still opposite your sign, you're not sure which romantic partner you want. Part of you wants to play the field while the other part of you fears dying alone and unloved. Don't go to extremes. Agree to date other people and keep things open-ended.

Fergie is SOOO 3008, OK?

The staff at Enclave (220 W. Chicago Ave.) didn't know if the Black Eyed Peas would perform during their appearance at the River North club Saturday, but like the club patrons on hand—some of whom had paid a $100 cover charge—they kept their fingers crossed.

And once the staff got tired of doing that, they played "Boom Boom Pow" and handed the Peas the mics. Fergie received a mic, looked at her husband, Josh Duhamel, and shrugged her shoulders before heading on stage to tell us how she's "so 3008" and we're "so 2000 and late."

Shortly after the performance, Will.i.am headed to Crobar for another appearance. Fergie and Duhamel stuck around and were joined in the heavily guarded VIP section by Slash, who had performed "Sweet Child O' Mine" with Fergie during the Peas' sold-out United Center show that night.

The singer, the actor and the guitarist eventually left together, making Taboo and Apl.de.ap the last Peas left in the club. To his credit, Taboo went out of his way to say hi to fans and even agreed to an impromptu interview around 1:30 a.m.

"I'm shooting a movie with [producer] Brian Grazer called 'Cartel,'" Taboo told me. "It's about the Mexican cartel. I play a character named Carlos. It's my fourth movie."

As for the band's follow-up to 2009's "The E.N.D.," Taboo said "Our biggest thing right now is our tour. We'll be touring through 2011."

Rancic needs a break

During awards season, "E! News" host Giuliana Rancic danced in front of Justin Timberlake at the SAG Awards, joked around with the cast of "The Hangover" at the Golden Globes and asked Kings of Leon if they got tired of hearing "Use Somebody" at the Grammys.

Is she relieved the awards season is over? Oh yeah.

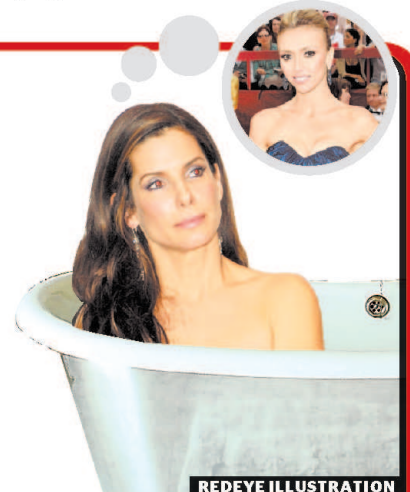

"I have to be honest; it felt like a long awards season," Rancic said while appearing with her husband, "Apprentice" winner Bill Rancic, at Cuvee (308 W. Erie St.) on Friday. "It's nice that it's finally over. It was a lot of work. But with everything happening in the world, people have much bigger problems than I have."

Giuliana and Bill's E! reality show, "Giuliana & Bill," wrapped up its second season Sunday night. Bill isn't sure if they will do a third season, but they're discussing it.

A certain Oscar-winning actress apparently would welcome another season.

"When I interviewed Sandra Bullock at the Globes, she goes, 'How is your house in Chicago? I can't believe you sold it,'" Giuliana said. "I go, 'Are you talking about my reality show?' and she goes, 'Yeah, I love watching it. I run a bubble bath and watch your show.'"

"Now of course I'm the biggest Sandra Bullock fan. I love people who are normal in Hollywood, because there are so few of them."

Blago the apprentice

Rod Blagojevich wasn't exactly feeling the love on Sunday night's premiere of "Celebrity Apprentice." Former pro wrestler Bill Goldberg said he has a lot of respect for his fellow contestants, with one big exception. Yep, our ousted governor. And former "Apprentice" winner Joan Rivers, who checked in on the diner challenge, said server Blago, who spent most of his time babbling to customers about his federal case, "couldn't get it together." Still, his team raised the most money, so he is safe.

GLAAD all around

Joy Behar, Cynthia Nixon and ABC's "Brothers & Sisters" are among this year's recipients of media awards from the Gay and Lesbian Alliance Against Defamation. Presented Saturday in New York, winners of the 21st Annual GLAAD Media Awards also include NBC's "Parks and Recreation" and an episode of "The Oprah Winfrey Show."

Can we expect another dead language?

Mel Gibson has a Viking epic in the works, and Leonardo DiCaprio is slated to star in it. Gibson said he has wanted to make this movie since he was a teenager, and he thinks it's the last film he'll direct, the Los Angeles Times reports. People close to Gibson brushed off that contention, saying he's too restless creatively to leave filmmaking.

So on—and so not

David Schwimmer is going to walk down the aisle with his girlfriend, Zoe Buckman, his rep confirmed to ew.com. This will be the first marriage for the Northwestern grad, 43, and the photographer, 24. In other love news, Demi Lovato said on Billy Bush's radio show that she and Joe Jonas are best friends—and more. Oooh. Unfortunately, we also have sad news in romance-land. "Ghost Whisperer" co-stars Jennifer Love Hewitt and Jamie Kennedy have decided to call it quits, a rep tells people.com.
